

High-Risk Conditions

Updated on 15 May 2026

To our valued investors:

Investment in high-risk trading products involves a higher degree of risk compared to standard investment products, due to factors including product structure, leverage, market volatility, and liquidity conditions. Such trading activities may expose investors to substantial losses and require a heightened level of risk awareness. We therefore encourage you to carefully review and fully understand our risk disclosures and related information before participating in any high-risk trading activities, so as to make informed decisions based on your own financial circumstances, investment objectives, and risk tolerance.

In order to facilitate a fair and orderly trading environment and to protect the interests of both the Broker and its clients, the following disruptive or abusive behaviors are prohibited:

1. The improper use of products and services provided through the Broker's system and/or policies, including but not limited to:
 - (a) The improper use or manipulation of quotation delays, quotation interruptions, quotation failures, and other quotation loopholes to obtain an unfair advantage;
 - (b) The improper use or manipulation of customer management systems, payment processing systems or transaction systems to obtain an unfair advantage;
 - (c) The improper use or manipulation of marketing and sales materials to obtain an unfair advantage.
2. The improper use or manipulation of the OTC market to obtain an unfair advantage through methods including but not limited to:
 - (a) Conducting short-term transactions that exceed the reasonable depth and range of liquidity provided by the market;
 - (b) Using differences in quotation and depth between various liquidity providers for arbitrage purposes.
3. Leveraging the OTC market against other related markets with the intention of obtaining an unfair advantage, including but not limited to:
 - (a) Arbitrage of time differences pertaining to an offer;
 - (b) Abuse of the limited capacity of the spot or futures market to influence arbitrage in other markets.
4. The improper use or manipulation of an inactive market trading environment with the intention of obtaining an unfair advantage.
5. Hedging transactions with other brokers to obtain an unfair advantage.

6. Other behaviour or activity that violates the principles of market fairness with the intention of obtaining an unfair advantage.

If these behaviors are detected in a client's trading activity, we reserve the right to declare the relevant transactions as well as any and all gains resulting from said transactions as invalid, and we will deduct the client's funds accordingly to recover all damages incurred to us as a result of the client's malicious trading activity.

The company highly encourages all investors to thoroughly familiarize themselves with the various risks inherent in the market, to assess their individual risk tolerances, and to manage their trading activities prudently. Investors should implement appropriate risk prevention measures, execute transactions in accordance with the Company's terms and conditions and applicable regulatory requirements, and contribute to the shared responsibility of maintaining an organized trading environment.

If you object to the conditions set forth above, please indicate your disagreement and reach us by email at support@6igroup.com. Please note that in such cases, we will be unable to proceed with your account opening application.
